

Abstract

A Method for providing event information of a mobile application, in particular of a mobile applications executed on a mobile phone, to a server comprising the steps of:

- generating of event information with respect to the mobile application by the respective mobile application
- storing the event information in an event database at the mobile phone
- generating a communication stream comprising event database information, and
- transferring the communication stream to a server over a radio communication and by using the mobile phone. A mobile phone, a server, a communication system and a software program product are adapted for carrying out the method